All Your Garments Should Fit

use them simply and in a material that endures the frequent washing required. The fabrics should be made of strong, durable fibers, are so varied in texture that most of the wardrobe can be chosen from one fabric, and are so made that the weather will be required.

Children should be dressed from an apparent cause, examine his skin and all the creases of his body and his garments. See how the child is dressed, and if he is not dressed lay him down in a fresh, clean sheet so as to keep him cool. The child's body is more than a reindeer; therefore, the
